

Motion & Time

(kīnēsis / chronos)

the ontological horizon within which all coming-to-be is possible

Aisthēsis

perception of the present — receptive of form without matter
DA II.12, 424a17–19

Phantasia

the temporally thick medium

De Mem.
Mnēmē

past

DA III.7
Noūs

present

Orexis

future

De Motu

/ Praxis

PRESENTATION

aisthēma → phántasma

RETENTION

aisthēsis

ANTICIPATION

bouleutikē

The Temporal Circuit

▲ Before — retention of the just-past

▲ Now — presentation as phantasma

▲ After — anticipation of the not-yet

Phantasia synthesizes all three, constituting the experience of continuous intelligible time.

Physics IV.11 219b1–2: “the number of motion with respect to before and after”

Key Passages

DA III.7, 431a14–17:
“the soul never thinks without a phantasma”

De Mem. 450a9–14: phantasma encodes both content and temporal position

Phys. IV.11, 219a3–6:
time perceived by marking off the before and after in motion